PROMOTIVE SURVEY RECEIVING COOPERATION OF BUSINESS MEN

One Fact Stated: There Are Enough Retail Stores—Will Not Prepare Too Ambitious a Program But One Utilizing Resources Already at Hand.

The Industrial Promotive Survey of Kingston which has been undertaken by the Chamber of Commerce is well under way. The different business interests of the city are giving this work their fullest cooperation. As a part of this survey it is necessary to bring together certain facts concerning local conditions which facts are not obtainable except by direct inquiry. Questionnaires have been sent to all retailers and wholesalers, to manufacturers, real estate agents and to the banks. Many replies are already in hand and there is evidence that much consideration has been given in answering the questions.

In addition to the questions relating to trade and manufacturing a general series of questions under the title "Has the City of Kingston any outstanding need" has been sent out and the citizens of Kingston are responding with many pertinent suggestions. The facts assembled by these formal questions which are designed to cover the salient conditions of each trade and industry are to be supplemented by conferences with leading business men representing the city's varied interests. Though these conferences there can be defined the business judgment of the community upon outstanding problems confronting it.

The survey will include the following subjects. Growth of Kingston, with comparative statistics, retail trade; wholesale trade; manufacutre. banking resources, city government costs; public utilities; transportation; public schools; health, recreation and amusement

As a part of the survey there will be a series of maps showing transportation facilities, educationsal and recreational facilities, location of industrial plants and sites, paved streets and kind of paving, present land occupancy (residence, retail wholesale and manufacturing), land valuations. This series of maps provides a basic city plan upon which an adequate zoning system may be projected.

This survey is concerned primarily with the promotive possibilities that exist in Kingston and the region which the city serves Consequently the text will be more than a recital of a large number of facts for the reason that facts mean little until they are interpreted in relation to other facts. The needs and opportunity of the community will serve as a background for the promotional possibilities that are presented.

Retail Trade.

The questionnaire submitted to the retailers covers in particular, the following points:

1—Geheral and extreme limits from which customers are drawn.

2—Relative importance of city and country as sources of business.

3—Localities from which goods are bought.

5—General wage scales.

6—Ease or difficulty of obtaining necessary help.

7—Ways in which groups other than the retail group, might be of help in extending or increasing the retail business.

8—General suggestions for the improvement of retail conditions.

The individual reports on these phases of the retail situation will be held in confidence but a consolidation of all replies will afford a fair picture of the general retail situation and offer a safe basis of judging the needs of existing stores. There are a sufficient number of retail stores to meet the needs of Kingston.

Manufactures.

Conditions which favorably circumstance the city for healthy industrial growth are in part at least ascertainable from the history of those cities and regions which have enjoyed remarkable development in manufactures.

Probabilities of industrial success are greatest when the city:

(a) Has a state of mind which in itself is an encouragement and support to industrial effort.

(b) Is close to other established centers of production.

(c) Has a reasonable supply of labor trained in a variety of lines of manufacture.

(d) Is surrounded by an agricultural region which furnishes a plentiful supply of milk, butter, eggs, and common food stuffs.

(e) Is located near the center of markets.

(f) Has convenient and adequate means of transportation for raw material and finished product.

(g) Has available water, electric, or steam power at reasonable rates.

(h) Has an equitable climate and attractive living condition.

(i) Has good schools, good churches, and good recreational facilities.

A state of mind which is an encouragement to industrial development implies an understanding of the difficulties with which the average manufacturer is confronted and readily yields to him a moral and public support which he must have. It is more concerned with helping the manufacturer who is already located in the city than it is with matching runeate claims with some promoter who proposes to bring in new and spectacular enterprise

The manufacturer of shirts and cigars is a large factor in the industrial prosperity of Kingston. These two industries are at present seriously handicapped by the lack of female labor. It has been the effort of the Chamber of Commerce to discourage manufacturers who would employ female labor from coming to Kingston and to secure industries that would mean male labor and more families for Kingston.

Agriculture.

Every business man of the city of Kingston is keenly interested in the welfare and prosperity of the farmers of Ulster County. The reports of the retailers will undoubtedly show that a relatively large proportion of their business originates outside the city itself. Their interest in the buying power of the farmer is direct. The same is true of the bankers and professional men while the manufacturers share indirectly in the benefits of agricultural prosperity throughout the surrounding territory. The question arises, is there anything which the business men of Kingston can do which will help the farmer and thereby help themselves?

This survey of Kingston will include a careful appraisal of the agricultural industry of Ulster County. Projects now under way that promise to increase the buying power of the farmer and the survival of property values in the farm may rightfully rely upon the active support of the business interests of Kingston.

The promotive possibilities of Kingston will be indicated in this report in concrete instances. To arrive at a promotive program requires that the survey shall be made from one or two points of view, namely, either from the standpoint of relatively simple things that can be undertaken now without a great body of new capital and an equally great managerial organization or from the standpoint of large promotional undertakings in industrial organization which would require outside capital and the creation of an exotic economic life in the midst of a community unready for such changes. This survey will choose the former alternative. Attention will be directed to things that can be done with the present stock of capital and skill. When these things have been done, when the community has unitedly taken these first steps, there will have developed a community state of mind that will encourage in a practical manner larger promotional possibilities To the carrying out of large enterprises, Kingston and the great Hudson Valley can look forward with assurance.

NEWBURGH HAS STRONG BASKETBALL TEAM.

Newburgh won its second game on the basketball court last Saturday afternoon by defeating the Chester High School team 27-26 in the last ten seconds of play. That is, the way was opened for a Newburgh victory in the last ten seconds, but the winning points were not made until after time was up. Newburgh was behind by one point with only a few minutes to play and as a result Chester proceeded to play a stalling game. However one of their players fouled a Newburgh player which was called by the referee, a neutral man, and Newburgh allowed to shoot twice. Masterson proceeded to shoot both fouls which gave the game to Newburgh by one point. Newburgh has one of the strongest teams in its history and is looking forward to winning the Hudson Valley Championship and then going to Syracuse to participate in the State championship series at that place in the spring.

STOLEN CIGARS ARE RECOVERED

Found Hidden in Hole in Wall of Ulster & Delaware Railroad Tunnel at Hasbrouck and Delaware Avenues—Taken From Snyder's Factory.

This morning Sergeant Hanley returned to Charles Snyder the sixteen boxes of cigars that were stolen the other night from the cigar factory in the rear of his residence on Broadway and Delaware avenue.

The thieves, after breaking into the factory and stealing the cigars, had proceeded down Delaware avenue with their booty and then into the tunnel.

The cigars were discovered by two small boys who notified the police department who went to the tunnel and returned with the cigars which were in boxes and undamaged.

The police believe that the same thieves who robbed the cigar factory are the ones who have been pulling off the thefts of skunk and other skins from dealers in the down town section of the city. It is thought that after breaking into the factory the cigars were hidden while the thieves proceeded downtown to steal skins.

DEAL IN STOCKS IN SUPREME COURT

Jacob L. Salzmann Wants Proceeds of Sale—Brokers Say These Were Wiped Out and Debt Incurred Through Subsequent Transaction in German Bonds.

An action was commenced Monday afternoon in supreme court before Judge Staley and a jury by which Jacob L. Salzmann of this city expects to recover from Siegelman Co., Inc., stock brokers of New York city, a sum of $1,159.00, proceeds of the sale of 100 shares of Keystone Sole Leather stock which defendants sold for plaintiff. The defendants in turn bring a counterclaim to recover $430.00 which they allege is still due them as a result of a transaction in German Government bonds which they claim plaintiff authorized them to purchase and later sell. The bond deal is denied by Mr. Salzmann.

The contention of the plaintiff is that a salesman of the brokerage firm came to his place of business and offered to sell 100 shares of the Keystone Sole Leather stock which he had, and which was of a questionable character. At that time through some inside dealings this stock had been traded in on the curb after a long slumber. Seeking to make good will between customers the stock brokerage firm sent their representative to Kingston and he offered to sell the stock while there was still a market Mr Salzmann agreed to this and authorized the salesman to sell at $11.00 per share or better. The stock was sold for $11.75.

At the same time Mr. Salzmann told the stock salesman that he had had stolen a $1,500 bond of the the Kingston Gas & Electric Company The salesman said that he would get this bond back and Mr. Salzmann signed a power of attorney, authorizing the salesman to act. The bond was never recovered as the bond had already been transferred.

However, Mr. Salzmann claims that the stock which he gave the salesman was sold and he received notice of this. He asked for the proceeds of the sale but it was not turned over to him. It was "credited to his account." At the time the salesman called he spoke of the advantages of German Government bonds which could be bought for a very low figure on account of the low exchange value of the German mark.

However, Mr. Salzmann claims that he never asked the company to purchase any of the bonds for him. These transactions took place in May and June of the present year.

Later he was sent by mail a slip to be signed in duplicate authorizing the company to purchase or sell 600 German government bonds at $6.15 each. The slips unsigned were taken to New York city where Mr Salzmann and his wife called upon the firm. At that time he was told that the bonds had been purchased according to his order. When he told them that he never authorized them to buy German bonds for him he was informed that the bonds had been purchased and that in order to sell them it would be necessary for him to sign the slip. He also testified that he was told that by signing the slip the company would be able to sell them and the loss to Mr. Salzmann would be but a "few cents." He claims that under this arrangement he signed the slips so as to protect the company from any great loss and that he expected to get his money back in a few days with a loss of but a few cents. However the bonds were sold at a time when the German mark was very low and there was a decided loss. The brokerage company claims now that in addition to the $1,159 which they procured for the stock he still owes them more money on the transaction. Mr. Salzmann claims that he never authorized them to make the purchase and that although several slips were produced in evidence bearing his signature he never signed them with the present writing on them. An order to purchase, which bears his signature, he says was not presented in that way to him and that he signed a blank slip at one time which he supposed was to furnish the firm with his address. In all there are seven or eight papers signed by Mr. Salzmann.

The defendants claim that at the time of the selling of the Keystone Sole Leather stock Mr. Salzmann was told of the advantages of the German bonds and that they were not good as an immediate profit getter but were good "for the long pull." They claim that Mr. Salzmann did authorize them to purchase the bonds and presented an order signed by him as evidence. Later they contend the bonds did go much lower and it was during this depression that Mr. Salzmann ordered them to sell the bonds without stating a price which they were to be disposed of. They claim that they were given an order to purchase the bonds but no price was stated and that they secured a second order in which the price was fixed at $6.15 each. Written confirmation of the purchase is also held by defendants. The company claim that they told Mr. Salzmann that the bonds were not good to produce immediate profit but that German government 5 per cent bonds purchased at the low rate of exchange would be a good investment for a long pull.

The case was not completed Monday afternoon and was continued this morning.

Judge James Jenkins, with Dubois Gillette, appears for plaintiff and Judge William D. Cunningham and Benjamin Gassman for defendants.

BOTULISM, A RARE DISEASE, KILLS TWO RESIDENTS HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Gabriele Sottile of No. 39 Gill Street, Died Within Two Hours of Each Other Today—Disease Contracted From Eating Pork at Sunday Breakfast—Pork Being Analyzed.

Gabriele Sottile and his wife, Gnizia, died within a few hours of each other today at the Benedictine Hospital of botulism, a rare disease contracted by eating pork at their Sunday morning breakfast at their home, No. 39 Gill street.

They had purchased some pork Saturday for the Sunday meal, and shortly after breakfast Sunday morning they became violently ill. Dr. H. L. Van Norstrand of Washington avenue, was summoned, and attended them.

Monday they gradually grew worse and Dr Van Norstrand advised their removal to the Benedictine Hospital. The husband, who was 32 years old, died there this morning, and this afternoon his wife died.

Dr. Van Norstrand, when questioned over the telephone by a Freeman representative, stated that death was due to botulism. This is a medical term denoting sausage poisoning. As far as known these are the first deaths of that disease to be reported in recent years.

Monday the health board was notified of the occurrence and samples of the pork were taken to the city laboratory on John street, where an analysis is being made by Miss B. Eleanor Easton. Dr. Van Norstrand stated to The Freeman that he was also sending samples of the pork to the state laboratory at Albany for analysis

Mrs. Sottile was about 25 years of age. Her husband was a son of Antonio Sottile of North street. The couple were the parents of a three months' old baby.

The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

ZERO WEATHER HIT KINGSTON

Monday Night the First That Thermometers Registered Below Zero This Season—River and Creek Frozen Over—Upper Hudson River Ice-Locked.

For the first time this season the thermometers dropped below the zero mark, and early rising residents this morning stated that at 6 o'clock their thermometers registered as low as two degrees below zero.

Monday afternoon the temperature dropped rapidly. This morning the Hudson river and the Rondout creek were frozen over solidly for the first time. In the river in the channel of the ferry Transport where the water is clear the ice was fully half an inch thick while above the ferry channel the snow ice ran to a thickness of several inches but broke up easily under the swells of the ferry when it resumed operations this morning.

The upper Hudson river is ice-blocked, and navigation between Kingston and Albany is practically closed for the season

As the day advanced the weather moderated, and at noon the rays of the sun caused the ice and snow in exposed positions to melt

TIME TABLE OF FERRY CHANGES

An important change in the time table of the Kingston-Rhinebeck ferry will take effect on Sunday when the winter schedule will be put in operation. Patrons of the ferry will find a complete time table in the advertising columns today.

SUDDEN COLD HALTS TOWING

Due to the cold spell which struck this section of the country Monday night, the Cornell Steamboat Company officials have decided to bring an end to the towing season today, when the last regular tow will be sent to New York city. The ice in the river has become much thicker and as a result impedes the progres of the boats to a considerable extent. If conditions permit special tows may be sent down the river if necessary, but the regular towing season ends today.

GLAISTER'S RADIO GETS NEWS FOR COMMUNITY

Ellenville, Dec. 19.—The people in the surrounding community will be greatly interested to again learn of the continued success with his radio of young Paul Glaister of Napanoch, N. Y., who was recently complimented in an article in this paper.

Recently Mr. Glaister was successful in reaching El Paso, Texas, with his self constructed instrument, and is now succeeding in still reaching various stations at distant points. He having reached 23 different stations in one night between 7 and 11:30 o'clock.

During the recent gubernational campaign, Mr. Glaister not only kept in touch with the campaign speeches being made in New York, and New Jersey, but was the first on election night, to be able to report the election results. He reported the election of Al Smith as early as 7:30, having received the news as it was broadcasted by the General Electric Company of Schenectady.

Later in the evening the people of Napanoch and Ellenville were informed, mainly through Mr. Glaister of the further results as they drifted in.

He is busy nightly receiving lectures, concerts and news of interest from near and far, often on Sunday evening listening to a sermon being preached and broadcasted by some famous preacher, hearing him as distinctly as if he were in the church itself.

Among the noted preachers who have been heard is the Rev. R. C. Spear, who preached an eloquent sermon from the Point Breeze Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Among the distant stations he heard very recently are W.S.B. of Atlanta, Georgia, "The voice of the South;" W.M.A.Q., Chicago, Ill.; N. O.F., Anacostin, D. C.; W.H.A.S., Louisville Journal, of Louisville; W.H.K. of Cleveland, O.; W.O.C. Davenport, Ia.; W.B.T., Charlottville, N. C.; W.W.J., of Detroit, Mich.; C.F.C.A. of Toronto and Montreal, Canada; and E.N.M. of Fort Worth, Texas; Minneapolis "The call of the North;" W.D.A.F., Kansas City; W.S.D., St. Louis and Boston; which is a record believed seldom if ever equalled by amateur or expert, or by any one of young Glaister's age, especially with an instrument of his own make it being entirely assembled by his own hands.

On Tuesday evening Glaister listened to the farewell speeches and reception given to Georges Clemenceau, by Ambassador Jules Jusserand and other notables, who paid honor to the "Tiger of France" upon the completion of his tour of this country.

Young Glaister is of the opinion that the radio is only in its infancy and that great improvements can and will be made which he is now trying by his experience to make.

Captain and Mrs. Hoffman are proud to have adopted a son with such a rare abundance of intelligence and are using every effort within their power to improve the talents of their son.

Corn Loaded in Cars by Air Blast.

Loading ear corn into box cars has been facilitated by the production of a portable air blast outfit, which is manufactured by an Illinois concern. It is described and illustrated in Popular Mechanics Magazine. When the front end of a wagon is elevated by a jack, its contents fall upon an endless belt that conveys the grain to a powerful blast of air, which blows the corn inside the car.

BOY SCOUTS

CHAMPION CHILDREN'S CAUSE

On Children's day during the recent Safety Week campaign in Greater New York, boy scouts directed traffic, gave demonstrations of first-aid and marched 7,000 strong in a mammoth children's parade. The scouts wore buttons containing the Safety Week slogan, "Don't Get Hurt!" and carried impressive mottoes emphasizing the need of caution, such as: "The A. B. C. of Safety Is, Always Be Careful," "Better Be Alert Than a Cripple," "A Rash Minute and a Human Wreck," "Better Belated Than Mutilated," "Scouts Are Trained for Safety," "Be Prepared Is Our Motto."

At the foot of a monument erected in Central park to the memory of the 1,054 children of Greater New York whose lives were lost in 1921 through preventable accidents, the mayor decorated with a gold medal Scout Samuel Levine, who, because of his thrilling rescue of two boys under desperate circumstances had been selected as the boy scout of Greater New York who had performed the most meritorous act of life-saving. The medal was especially designed and was the gift of Judge Elbert C. Gary.

Because of the number of acts of heroism performed by scouts, the committee who selected the boy to receive the medal found it difficult to reach a decision. Among the outstanding cases were the rescue by individual scouts of a small girl, whose dress had caught afire while she was playing near a bonfire; of a small boy who fell from a dock into deep water; of a girl who had broken through ice while skating; of a young woman who had discarded her water-wings, and unable to swim, ventured too far out in the surf; and of a boy, not a scout who was being carried away by a swift current. The last mentioned rescue was performed by a scout who had sight in only one eye.

AN ENGLISH SCOUT LEADER

At the invitation of the American delegation at the recent international conference of scout officials at Paris, Capt. Francis Gidney of England, attended the national biennial conference of scout executives at Blue Ridge, North Carolina, in September.

Capt. Francis Gidney is one of the most prominent leaders of scouting in England. He has been a scoutmaster since the early days of the movement, and for the past three years has been camp chief of the well-known Gilwell Park training school for scout leaders, Chingford, Essex, England. Captain Gidney has placed in his camp many of the picturesque features of American Indian and cowboy life. He is an expert in lassoing and rope work of various kinds, and gives credit to our own Will Rogers for much of his knowledge. Captain Gidney brought with him an extensive exhibit of English scouting equipment and handiwork. He says: "The only continent on which I have not had the opportunity of studying scouting at first hand is Australia, and I am looking forward with keen interest to my visit to this country and to meeting the scout executives at their conference. It is a privilege which is much appreciated not only by myself personally, but by the whole scout movement in Great Britain. I do sincerely hope that it will prove a link in scouting operation between the two great countries."

HIKING HELPED

AID COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

Scouts contributed assistance to the recent convention of the New England councils of the United Commercial Travelers at Springfield, Mass., by maintaining information and aid stations, by furnishing a bicycle safety-first squad, a comfort squad, traffic guards and a fife and drum corps, and by entering a float in the pageant of industry, a feature of the last day of the convention.

MAYOR HAS OWN TROOP

In Springfield, Mass., Troop No. 12 has both paid honor to and been honored by the city's chief executive, Mayor Edwin F. Leonard, who is one of the community's strongest supporters of the boy scout movement. Last February during twelfth anniversary week, his honor, as mayor, received the badge of honorary tenderfoot scout. Recently, as private citizen, he was decorated with a veteran pin for his services. Troop No. 12 is "The Mayor's Own."

A little maid attracted some attention in a village street by riding along in her carriage with eyes fast shut and hands held up in an attitude of prayer. Her nurse asked what was it she was thinking about, and it seemed she was thinking of lunch. "I'm just saying my grace," she explained, "to save time."

GOOD PUMPKIN AND SQUASH RECIPES

Several Unusual Dishes May Be Made From Squash or Pumpkin.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Either pumpkin or squash may be used in the following recipes, which suggest a number of out-of-the-ordinary dishes made from the sliced or canned vegetables in addition to pie. The recipes have been tested by the United States Department of Agriculture.

To prepare the pumpkin or squash cut it open, remove the seeds and stringy portion, and pare. Very young, tender squash, of the round white or yellow crooknecked varieties may be cut up and cooked without paring. When baking Hubbard squash or pumpkin it may be cut up into three-inch squares clean of seeds and baked without paring, rind side down. One of the most satisfactory methods of cooking pumpkin or squash is by steaming it till tender in a colander or steamer over boiling water. Cooked in this way it is less watery than when boiled.

Pumpkin or Squash as a Vegetable.

In addition to plain mashed steamed pumpkin, seasoned with butter, salt and pepper, or baked squares of pumpkin, this excellent vegetable may be served creamed, glazed or en casserole.

Creamed Pumpkin.

Cut the pumpkin meat into strips about half an inch thick. Steam or boil until partially tender. Place strips in baking dish and coat each piece with a sirup made by boiling together:

½ cup sugar	1 tablespoon butter
¼ cup water

Corn sirup may be used in place of sugar. Place in the oven and cook until brown.

Diced Pumpkin in Casserole.

Cut the raw pumpkin into small pieces, place in glass casserole dish, or any baking dish with a cover. Sprinkle with salt and a little pepper. Allow to each cup of diced pumpkin a half cupful of boiling water and a tablespoonful of butter. Cover closely and cook in oven until pumpkin is tender and the water absorbed. Serve hot in the dish in which it was baked.

Pumpkin timbales are very good when served with ham or cold meat of any kind.

Pumpkin Timbales.

1 pint mashed pumpkin	⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup milk	⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
2 eggs	½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon mace

Mix together and put in buttered custard cups. Stand in a pan of boiling water and bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes. When the mixture is firm turn carefully from the cups and send to the table. This same mixture may be baked in a shallow dish with cheese grated over the top. In this case omit the cinnamon and mace.

The flavor of pumpkin combined with milk in a soup appeals to many palates.

Cream of Pumpkin Soup.

¼ cup butter	4 cups milk
2 to 4 tablespoons flour	¾ cup mashed pumpkin
1 to 2 tablespoons onion juice	1½ teaspoons salt
	⅛ teaspoon pepper

Melt butter in saucepan and stir in flour. Add salt, pepper and mashed pumpkin and blend together. Add the milk and bring to the boiling point. Add onion juice when almost ready to serve. Serve hot.

Pumpkin Used as Dessert.

Pumpkin Custard.

1 to 1½ cups pumpkin or squash thoroughly cooked (canned squash may be used)	½ cup sugar
	½ to 1 teaspoon salt
	⅛ to ¼ teaspoon allspice
	¼ teaspoon mace
	1 tablespoon butter
cup to 1 pint milk	½ to 1 teaspoon cinnamon
2 eggs

Instead of pouring this mixture, which is very similar to pumpkin pie filling, into a pastry shell, it can be turned into ramekins or custard cups and baked like any custard, in a moderate oven, set in a pan of water. In case the custard is used for a pie the larger amounts of spice and the smaller amount of milk may be used. If served as plain custard the smaller amount of seasoning is more appropriate.

Pumpkin Bread Pudding.

1 cup stalebread crumbs	1-3 cup sugar
1¼ cups sweet milk	1 teaspoon salt
1 cup mashed pumpkin (boiled or steamed and put through a colander)	1 teaspoon vanilla
	2 egg yolks
	2 tablespoons butter (melted)

Pour the milk over the bread and allow to stand until the crumbs soften. Add pumpkin that has been cooked and put through a colander, before measuring. Add the egg yolks and the melted butter. Beat well. Pour into buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until the center is firm. Remove from the oven, spread the top with a tart jelly, pile meringue lightly on top and return to oven long enough to brown the meringue. Serve cold with cream. If preferred, the jelly can be omitted and the pudding is good even if you do not serve cream with it.

Meringue.

Two egg whites beaten very stiff, four tablespoonfuls sugar, a pinch of salt and one-half teaspoonful vanilla.

Pumpkin and Squash Breads.

Several quick breads may be made, using pumpkin or squash.

Pumpkin Corn-Dodger.

1½ cups cornmeal	2 tablespoons sugar
1½ cups cooked pumpkin	1 cup water
1 teaspoon salt	2 teaspoons baking powder
3 tablespoons shortening

The pumpkin should be cooked very tender and mashed free from lumps. Put sugar, salt, baking powder and cornmeal together into a sieve, and sift them into the pumpkin; mix thoroughly. Add the water last, a third of a cupful at a time; if the pumpkin is quite moist it may not be necessary to use the whole cupful of water. Pour into hot well-greased skillet, cook slowly over the fire, turning when well browned beneath; it will take about 35 minutes to cook thoroughly. Serve hot with butter.

Pumpkin Corn Bread.

1 cup mashed pumpkin	4 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk	1 teaspoon salt
1 cup cornmeal	2 tablespoons melted fat
¾ cup flour
1 egg

Mix in order given. Pour in greased baking pan and bake 40 minutes in a hot oven. Cut in squares, and serve hot.

RICE IS GOOD FOR CHILDREN

Cooked in Milk, It Has Rich Flavor and Is Particularly Nourishing—Fine for Lunch.

Rice cooked in milk has a richer flavor than when cooked in water, and is particularly nourishing and wholesome for children. As a school lunch dish the United States Department of Agriculture suggests that rice may be served with tomato sauce and grated cheese, as the main dish of the meal, or with maple sirup or crushed fresh fruit as dessert.

One cup of rice will absorb a quart of milk when cooked slowly in a double boiler. First wash the rice thoroughly in several waters so as to remove all loose starch, then drop it slowly into the hot milk, and add one teaspoonful of salt for each cupful of rice. Cook the rice until the grains are soft when pressed between thumb and finger, or for about thirty minutes. Remove the lid of the double boiler during the last part of the coooking, so that the grains will separate.

BROILING STEAKS OR CHOPS

"Pan Broiling" Is Cheaper Way, Suggests the Department of Agriculture.

In broiling steaks or chops do you use the gas broiler or do you "pan broil" them? The United States Department of Agriculture says the latter is the cheaper way. Heat the frying pan sizzling hot, brush it with just enough fat to keep the meat from sticking, turn the meat quickly from side to side to retain all the juices. Meat cooked in this way is often more juicy than when broiled in the oven.

CHRISTMAS PREPARATIONS AT BENEDICTINE HOSPITAL

"Christmas comes but once a year When it comes it brings good cheer." It was to carry out the spirit of this merry old jingle that the younger members of the auxiliary assembled at the Benedictine Hospital on Saturday "to trim" for the holidays. Generous offerings toward the decorating fund from Mrs. J. O. Winston, the Dwyer Brothers, Hugh Talbot, Dr. C. B. Cragin and John Hiltebrant made it possible to procure material in abundance with which to work. For the feathery branches and boughs fresh from the woods, thanks are due to John Flemming, at the hospital who was also untiring in his interest and assistance in the afternoon's work. Armfuls of the feathery greens were used in trimming the wards and corridors which with the splashes of red given to the arrangement the hospital throughout was made to glow with Christmas cheer and beauty. The decorations at the nurses' home were carried out in pine and holly and arranged to blend harmoniously with the picturesque beauty of the surroundings. Those who assisted in the work of which Miss Rosekrans was in charge, include the following members of the auxiliary who also gave substantial amounts toward the expenses: Mrs. John Weber, Mrs. Leo Saddlemire, Mrs. John Larkin, Mrs. John Goldrick, Miss Kathryn Barry, Miss Florence Cordts, Miss Helen Hussey, Miss Ida Weber, Miss Stella Rice, Miss Emily Rice, Miss Pearl Stock and Miss Linderman who is on the staff of nurses at the hospital. The Sisters extend their greetings and warmest thanks to all who have helped at the Benedictine Hospital to make glad, at this festal season, the hearts of those on whom the hand of suffering rests wearily.

RIGHT BUT NOT POPULAR.

President Harding's desire to reduce the cost of government should be vigorously supported. Until there is some definite step toward cutting out red tape and duplication of effort in federal business, the rent payer, who is actually the tax payer, will not discover any appreciable reduction. Since the galloping increase in the expense of administering public affairs began there has been a corresponding increase in rents, and a decrease in rents will not be reported before there is a decrease in the cost of government.

Every president, beginning with Roosevelt, and perhaps others before Roosevelt, was confident the cost of managing federal business should be lowered, but no president got very far with a curtailment. The effort has been made, but opposition, open and secret, presented so many obstacles that it is consistent to believe that the chief executives felt they were undertaking the impossible.

There is no doubt that more than one-third of the employes in the federal service could be eliminated and the efficiency of the service improved. To do so would mean establishing hard, cold business methods, and getting dollar for dollar. Economy has never been popular. There is, however, duplication of responsibilities, and many bureaus could be wiped out. Men who know what should be done have submitted recommendations, but the desired change has not yet been put into operation.

President Harding has his mind upon making some headway and he should be given the heartiest support, for it is certain that while the cost of government increases there will be no decrease in taxes. If the rent payer would only see that, as a rent payer, he is the tax payer there might be some chance, for the rent payers are in the majority and the big problem in this country is taxation.

While there may be delays, the day will come, nevertheless, when there will be a reduction, and, like all things that are blocked, when it does come it will come with a rush. But it will come, and there will be no doubt as to its presence. Economy is right, if it is not popular, and right, in the end, must prevail.

THE NEW YEAR.

Now, that New Year's is approaching, one's thoughts turn to what the new year may bring forth. Hope and ambition are always active and something is achieved, in part, even if all we desire fails to come into our possession. Achievement is due, not alone to hope, for hard work is essential, and that which comes to us unearned is of no lasting value.

"What I would like to do next year," is frequently heard as the first of January approaches. There is no doubt whatever that our desire to accomplish this, that or the other thing, if it is sincere, is advanced even if it is not fulfilled in every detail. This is the natural progress in every walk of life. The struggle, and it is a struggle, has gone on for years, and it will continue. This is human. But it is also human not to let ambition for material things prevent us from giving a thought to someone less fortunate or to extend a helping hand.

At the beginning of 1924 if we can look back over 1923 and point to something we did to help somebody, to make the load of someone lighter, we will be compensated by the knowledge that we did something that was worth while. If we cannot take inventory and determine that we did at least something of this sort, all other accomplishments, no matter what they are, will be hollow.

In his message President Harding said that the question of prohibition enforcement is so "distracting the public mind" and so "prejudicing the judgment of the electorate" that new expedients and methods are necessary. Enforcement is relatively easy in States overwhelmingly for prohibition; the difficulty is that there are States where sentiment is overwhelmingly the other way.

Los Angeles is getting after speeding motorists with a sharp stick, sending three hundred offenders, male and female, to jail for varying terms since November 20. The police judges seem to mean business, even a popular movie queen not being able to smile her way out of responsibility in this particular. With so many murders of other sorts on its hands, Los Angeles seems to see urgent need of cutting down the number of motor-car killings.

Burroughs Club Nature Notes

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Dept. of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. What kind of animals are counted among vertebrates?
2. How does a spider spin a thread twenty or more feet long, between two points in an open space high in air?
3. What kind of eggs do wild turkeys lay?

Answers In Tomorrow's Nature Notes.

Answers to Previous Questions.

1. Do salmon eat before spawning?

The practice varies with the kind of salmon. Salmon living off the Pacific Coast do not eat after entering fresh water, on the ascending journey to spawning grounds. Salmon of the Atlantic Coast are a different kind, survive spawning, and do feed.

2. We have seen sitting on a branch of a dead tree, near a boggy pond, what we take to be a black crowned night heron, from 5 to 7 birds in an afternoon. Some seem pearl gray and other speckled brown. The heavy bill, red eye and pale yellow legs seem to identify them. Is this right?

Yes, as far as we can guess. The gray specimens are adults, and ought to show greenish-black patches on top of head, on back and on shoulders. The brownish speckled ones are probably immature birds. Nocturnal in habit, and gives a hoarse cry which Eaton (Birds of New York) spells "Quawk." Hoffman, (Guide To Birds of New York and New England) says one way to tell a bittern from this heron (aside from color marks) is that the heron regularly perches on trees and the bittern does not. This confirms the correspondent's observation.

3. I have an orange tree 7 years old which will not blossom. What ails it?

Nothing, except that oranges belong in a tropical climate, or very warm one, and ordinarily will not blossom in a domestic dwelling in the North. In a hothouse, where warm moist atmosphere is maintained, they will do so.

Influence of the Opal.

The modern superstition which regards the opal as an unlucky gem is traced to an ignorant prejudice which arose in Italy during the plague in the Fourteenth century. Before this time it was considered a most fortunate stone, particularly to those born under the heavenly constellations Leo, Libra, or Aquarius. So highly was it prized in ancient Rome that the Senator Nonius chose to be exiled rather than sell to Mark Antony for 20,000 sesterces an opal ring that love-sick Mark wanted to bestow on Cleopatra. Nonius had his precious opal buried with him, and it was found a few years ago in his tomb.

Feeds Upon Gold.

There are several kinds of perch, as well as the black striped green one with the red fins lads like to catch but hate to scale. One of them is called the Aspro, or to give him his proper name the perca aspera, though the fishermen of the Rhone in Europe where he lives and swims call him the Wizard. It is a pretty yellow fellow, something like our dore, wall-eyed pike, or pike-perch, or more like the small daddy-ruffs English boys know about. The peasants of the Rhone valley persist in maintaining that the Wizard feeds upon grains of gold it picks up from the sand of the river bed!

World's Oldest Museum.

The oldest museum in the world may be found in the city of Harn, the former capital of Japan. Since its foundation in 756, it has gone through all the changes of the Japanese empire without a single addition to its collection. The museum contains about 3,000 articles, which are said to be among the most beautiful specimens of decorative work which have ever been produced by human hand. The museum is opened on only one day of the year, when an official committee makes a visit of inspection to see that the collection remains intact.

HOW

INGENIOUS SPIDER LURES UNWARY FLY INTO TRAP.

—A spider constructing his web is said to be one of the most interesting and most beautiful sights in nature.

Having found a suitable place, he begins first to make the "spokes." The spokes are made of a different kind of material from the web proper—they are not stick.

Now begins the real business of making the trap itself. Starting at one of the spokes, the spider gums down a thread and then moves in a spiral direction, paying out the thread as he goes.

It is gummed firmly down to each spoke and it is provided with thousands of tiny drops of gum in between the spokes.

This gum, secreted by a special gland in the spider, holds captive any fly that touches one of the spiral strands.

Round and round goes the spider, weaving the sticky net and spacing its meshes so that the fly can pass between them.

As soon as the trap is perfect the spider takes up his position at its center, laying each of his eight legs on one of the spokes. In this way he is able to feel at once the arrival of a fly in any part of the net.

If he captures an insect too large to be dealt with summarily he weaves a fine web round it and does not come to close quarters until it is so securely bound that it cannot move a limb.

ASSURES WINDING OF CLOCK

How Opening and Shutting of Door Is Used to Maintain Regularity of Timepiece.

Quite a useful little invention is one that is made by a continental firm for winding up the clock. This is done merely by the opening and shutting of the door of the room, London Answers states.

The clock—a large one for hanging on the wall—is hung just above the door. When this is opened the movement is transmitted by means of a Bowden cable to the mechanism of the clock.

Precautions are taken to prevent too much winding, if the door is very frequently opened, and on the other hand that it is sufficiently wound if the door is not opened more than three or four times during the day. This is done by the use of a spiral device.

It is quite a useful and clever invention, for how many of us, with the best intention in the world, have a way of forgetting to wind our timepieces. The clocks usually stop at the most inconvenient times. With a contrivance like this, we can be sure that at least one clock in the house can always be relied upon to be doing its duty.

How Plants Catch Cold.

That trees, like human beings, are liable to catch cold, and could not withstand droughts and wind, was one of the points brought out in a paper on "The Relation of Soil to Plant Growth," by Mr. A. A. Hudson, K. C., recently read at the Surveyors' Institution. The chlorotic condition of plants was similar to anemia in human beings, he said. Plants responded to changes in environment, and if they continued for several generations under the same conditions the newly acquired characters became tentatively, if not absolutely, fixed. The same might be said of human beings. Mr. Hudson added that when the French gave up their soups and salads, and fed on beefsteak, they began to develop the same characteristics as the English.

Why Use of Chair Is Advisable.

"I never stand when I can sit down," says Alice, who has discovered the value of those short respites in the round of housework and eases the strain of daily toil in simple ways. Most women stand before the mirror to do their hair, a quite unnecessary waste of strength. Even if the daily coiffure occupies only a brief space of time, those few minutes will amount in the end to a good sum of rest. Alice prepares vegetables while sitting down, and does not find it necessary always to stand whilst ironing. She sits down to polish silver or glass, and consequently is not that pathetic figure—a woman who is always tired.

How Age of Whale Is Learned.

The age of a whale is ascertained by the size of the laminae of certain organs in the mouth, formed of a horny substance commonly called whalebone. By this method of computation, it is known that some whales have attained the age of 400 years. Some species of birds also attain a great age. The swan has been known to live 100 years and it is recorded that ravens have exceeded that age. Parrots have been known to live 80 years. Pheasants and domestic poultry rarely exceed 12 to 15 years.

Dog Gave Life for Child.

Moate, a pet collie, in death, is being hailed as a hero in Pueblo, Colo. Spying a big centipede resting on the shoulder of a four-year-old boy while he played beneath a tree on a picnic ground the dog shot out his paw, knocking the centipede from the child. The child was unhurt, but despite the efforts of physicians, "Moate" soon became paralyzed as the result of poisoning and succumbed.

Air Engines Used in Mines.

Compressed air locomotives are in general use in the coal mines in France, since the French laws forbid the use of electric or gasoline locomotives where fire-damp might cause explosions.

Capital's Monumental Churches.

Among the great capital cities of the world Washington alone has no monumental church. Two, however, are building. The corner stone of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception has been laid, and the apse of the new Protestant cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul is already completed. The protestant cathedral is at the summit of Mount St. Alban, overlooking Washington, a situation one writer calls "the noblest site of any cathedral in the Old World or the New."—Youth's Companion.

Bluff Called.

The evening train had filled rapidly. Three commuters, each of whom had a seat, were loudly boasting what they'd do if they wanted a seat, and all because one other man had jumped on the train, turned over double seats and was holding them—the only unoccupied ones in the entire car—for three persons who had not yet put in their appearance.

"Believe me," said one of the former three, "if I needed a seat I'd sit right down there with him."

"Well," said the second, "he wouldn't bar me from sitting there."

And still the third spoke up: "Say, if I had no seat I'd go right back there and turn them over in double-quick order."

Two business girls, acquaintances of the three brave, outspoken men, had arrived late and were standing in the aisle near the three, debating where they'd sit.

One of them spoke up and said to the men: "Say, go back and turn them over for us, will you?"

But not one of the men moved. All smiled sickly and turned to their evening papers, while the two B. G.'s sought seats in another car.—Chicago Journal.

Getting Her Reward.

I have always made it a practice to wear dainty house dresses in the morning and afternoon frocks at home no matter what happens.

When my son was eight we moved to a small town where the women were far from up to date in dress and, to be brutally frank, not always neat.

In a few weeks son had become acquainted with other boys near his age, and had been to most of their homes.

One evening he came in as I was getting dinner.

He paused just inside the kitchen door and studied me for several moments, then blurted out: "Mom, why don't the other boys have young, pretty mothers like you?"—Exchange.

Missed Something.

Little Artie was taken for the first time to the moving pictures. When he came out he was loud in his praises of what he had seen, but he added, "Say, ma, next time we go let's get seats 'way up in front. We sat so far back I couldn't hear a word they said."—Boston Transcript.

...ATION AT WAR TO BE ETCHED ON MOUNTAIN

...ribute to Confederates Who Died for "the Cause."

...TZON BORGLUM IN CHARGE

...e of the Greatest Memorials Ever Known Is Being Carved Near Atlanta, Ga.—Generals Lee, Jackson, Gordon and Stewart Will Be Depicted Leading Their Armies—Figures Are 30 Feet High—Hundreds of Sculptors Volunteer.

One of the greatest memorials the ...orld has ever known—a tribute to ...e soldiers who fought and died for ...e "Lost Cause"—is being carved in ...e rock on the sheer side of Stone ...ountain, 16 miles east of Atlanta, ...a., says the New York World.

For a mile across the smooth, perpendicular face of this giant monolith, all the pomp and circumstance of a nation at war will be etched, and at the head of his soldiers, leading them into battle, will be Gen. Robert E. Lee, idol of the Confederacy, and one of the greatest military leaders the world has ever known. Behind him, in detail will be shown General Stonewall Jackson, John G. Gordon, J. E. B. Stewart and Jefferson Davis.

Eight years will be required to complete the project, which includes besides the carving on the mountainside, a park of several hundred acres at the base, an open-air theater patterned after the Coliseum of ancient Rome, and capable of seating 20,000 persons, a museum hollowed out of the mountain wherein will be deposited treasures of the war to be dedicated to the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Some idea of the magnitude of the statues can be gained from the outline of General Lee's head, which has been placed in position on the mountain It is 9 feet in height. The nose is 2 feet. His complete figure, on his charger, will be over 80 feet high. All the other figures will be carved in equally heroic proportions.

Borglum in Charge.

Gutzon Borglum, world-renowned sculptor, will have complete charge of the work, while hundreds of sculptors from all over the world have written him, asking permission to assist. Mr Borglum has donated his services He says that he intends to make the Stone mountain memorial the greatest thing he has ever done. He would not allow the Daughters of the Confederacy, originators of the plan, even to pay his expenses while he is in Atlanta at work, but instead has assisted in raising funds to pay for the actual expenses incidental to the work and himself has contributed. He says all of the other artists who have asked to be allowed to assist, simply wish the distinction of having part in the work and seek no pay. Mr. Borglum said

"People of the world cannot visualize the magnitude of this undertaking. It will become one of the world's greatest classics It will be greater than the Lion of Lucerne, and that seventh wonder of the world, the Colossus of Rhodes, and will take its place among the marvels of the universe I am happy and proud to have part in the undertaking, and I intend to make it my life's work.

"Of course the work will be filled with dangers. Many of the men engaged in it may lose their lives, for a false step at any time will mean an instantaneous death—yet the thought of danger only heightens my desire to overcome all obstacles. And what great work has ever been accomplished without its attendant tragedy?

"The Stone mountain shall become a reality It shall live as long as time itself to perpetuate the memory of those stirring Civil war days."

He Will Work at Night.

Mr. Borglum plans to do some of his work at night. To that end, he has designed an especially powerful telescope lens for the projection of magnified figures against the huge sides of granite, by means of which, with a powerful light, photographs are to be thrown against the side of the mountain, as upon a prodigious screen.

"Many people scoffed at this idea at first," Mr. Borglum said, "but I told them they could project pictures on stars if they could get a powerful enough light. Carving statues at night will be something new, but it is just as feasible as working in my studio at Stamford, Conn."

Work on the memorial was started in 1916, when sufficient money to care for all incidental expenses was raised. However, the war made it necessary to halt operations, and only recently has it been renewed

Mr Borglum, assisted by several engineers, actively supervised the erection of scaffolding down the side of the mountain from the top, and now drawing the head of General Lee, superintended placing it on the exact spot where he will begin to carve. He has laid out all the other principal figures.

At present he is completing a 200-ton assignment for Newark, N. J., to be known as the All-American's war memorial, which commissioner he secured before the work on Stone mountain memorial was resumed. As soon as this has been completed, he will return to Atlanta and resume his work. He will remain there until it has been completed and the memorial is an actual fact.

That will be in 1929!

Six eight years of continual work will be required to complete the memorial.

A Wonder of the World.

Stone mountain itself is an eighth wonder of the world. Thousands of people from all over the United States annually visit this greatest single mass of granite anywhere in the world.

Rising 700 feet on its sheer side, where the memorial will be carved, it covers an area of seven miles. It is one mile from the base to the summit on the approachable side. It is the largest monolith in the world and it has been estimated that it contains enough granite to pave a highway seventy times around the world.

Sam H. Venable, an Atlanta millionaire, who owns the mountain and has deeded the perpendicular side to the Daughters of the Confederacy for the memorial as well as the tract of ground at its base, which will be called Confederate park, obtained it many years ago for a mule. Since then he has made a fortune selling granite from the quarries on its far side. His home in Druid Hills, in Atlanta, one of the city's most magnificent residences, is constructed entirely out of Stone mountain granite.

Mr. Venable is one of the strongest supporters in the South of the memorial and open-air theater, which is being constructed at the base. Besides deeding the mountain side and ground, he has subscribed liberally to the fund for completing the project.

He says that unless the Daughters of the Confederacy decide to build a hotel adjacent to the park, he contemplates erecting one of the finest tourist hotels in the country in Stone Mountain, Ga., only a few hundred yards from the mountain, to care for the thousands of visitors who are expected annually to view the memorial.

None Ever Scaled It.

It is a popular belief in Atlanta and towns adjacent to the mountain that it was once the home of a great Indian tribe, and that the Indians were the only ones who were ever able to scale the perpendicular side, where the memorial is to be placed. But so far as known history goes there has never been a human being who has succeeded in climbing this side. Many have tried, some have met death, others have been able to get a part of the way up, but never has a man been able to go all the way to the top of Stone mountain except along the one beaten track from the south approach.

The present day Ku Klux Klan held its first initiation at midnight atop the mountain and since that time has held many ceremonies on it. It is said that in the carpetbag days just after the Civil war the real Ku Klux Klan held many meetings there.

The feasibility of the mountain as a sounding board was recently successfully demonstrated by Marie Tiffany, opera star, whose voice was heard a mile away from the mountain, when she sang with her back to the perpendicular wall.

Juvenile Jesse James Terrorizes Section of Kentucky.

Claude Eagle, the juvenile "Jesse James," who terrorized Corbin, Ky., and made a safe getaway there, is a prisoner of Richmond, Ky.

At that, the youngster, small for his eleven years, slipped through the bars while a deputy jailer watched him, unseen, and was making a dash for a door which had been left ajar. The officer grabbed him as he started out, whereupon the youngster exclaimed: "H—ll, I thought I was getting away!"

Eagle was found by Sheriff Elmer Deatherage trying to sell a lady's gold watch and chain. He told the officer his mother had given it to him to sell and buy a bicycle. It developed the watch had been stolen from Mrs. Rolla Harrison of Richmond. The boy left Corbin with loot valued at $80,000, after holding two officers at bay with a pistol and eluding a posse.

CHEWS ROPE; SAVES TWO

Wife Gnaws Anchor Strand Asunder and Canoe Rides Safely to Shore.

Biting tenaciously at a slender anchor rope until it parted and an overturned canoe became a floating buoy that carried them to safety, Mrs. Delmar McDaniel of Detroit, Mich., saved herself and her husband from drowning in Lake St. Clair.

The canoe capsized while Mr. and Mrs. McDaniel were fishing. They each used one hand to cling to the canoe and paddled with the other, after Mrs. McDaniel severed the anchor rope. Little by little the craft was forced to the lake shore, and finally their cries for help were answered.

McDaniel caused the canoe to overturn when he leaned too far over one side. The craft was moored and the husband used all his strength in an effort to untie the rope, but without avail, so his wife set to work with her teeth to sever it.

Indian Lodge Tales

THE CREATION OF MAN

NOW when the Manitou had created the birds and the beasts and the fishes, and had them created the grizzly to rule over them, he returned to heaven content with his handiwork. He left behind him on the earth a happy kingdom, where the animals lived in peace together and where the grizzly, who was their king, was kind and just and fair to weak and strong alike.

As time went on there finally came a daughter to cheer the life of the Manitou in heaven; and as she grew to womanhood she was fair to look upon; as beautiful as the dawn and as stately as the oak. The blue sky gave the color to her eyes, the placid lakes put their expression there; and golden sunbeams gave their beauty to her hair. The south wind warmed her blood and made it red; the snows gave off their glow to tinge her skin. The rippling waters, soft and low, gave up their music in a voice for her. And she was fair to look upon, even as the blossoms in her hair.

The Manitou, who loved her much, gave her the freedom of the heavens and the earth to go and come as she pleased, excepting only the one small spot where the grizzly was given power to reign. Here she must not go, for there were evil spirits and strong hands to stay her way. And there the power of the Manitou did not avail, for it was the home of the grizzly who was ruler.

But one day, walking all alone, the maiden forgot the warning of her father and wandered into this forbidden land where lived the grizzly, and where flowers bloomed and all was beautiful and bright. As she wandered about the forest the beasts saw her beauty and carried word of her coming to the grizzly. And the grizzly came down the trail and looked upon her and desired her He was so impressed with her beauty that he forgot the Manitou and his power, and seeing the maiden, carried her off against her will to his home. And there he kept her hid away for many moons and finally he married her, although it was against her will, and for long years he held her in captivity and the Manitou knew not where she had gone or why.

Finally a child was born to the grizzly and the daughter of Manitou And this child, when he had grown, heard from his mother's lips the story of the grizzly's cruelty He learned, too, how the grizzly had run away with the daughter of Manitou and had stolen her from her home and kept her in captivity, and he was very angry, and prayed night and day to the Manitou, who was his grandfather, asking that he might be given the strength and the wisdom to right the wrong.

So the Manitou heard his plea and decided that the grizzly must be punished; and so the Manitou decreed that the grizzly henceforth should walk on four feet like the beasts he had governed And on his body hair was made to grow, and his language became the grunt and the squeal; and he was made to dig in the ground to find his food and his eyes were made to watch his feet and no longer could he look toward heaven and into the face of the Manitou, who is good always.

In his place the Manitou named the Red Man—the son of the Great Spirit's daughter and the grizzly—to rule so long as he bore himself as a man. From his mother he inherited his form and beauty and wisdom and from his father the strength and courage and power—and so he came to rule over the land which the Manitou had created.

So was the creation of the Chosen People who are the tribesmen, and who lived for ages under the sunshine of heaven and counseled with Manitou and ruled long and well until in later years evil spirits came from the sea and fought and wrestled with the Chosen People and took away their power and their strength. Then did the Manitou intervene to set right the affairs of earth and to give to us, who are his children, those things which are ours by right. But that, again, is another story, and too many stories at one time are not best for little ears

Note—Here again we have a legend from the nomadic tribes of the mountain district—the Utes, the Comanches and all the tribes of the great Shoshone family. This legend, expressed in pictures, is one of the features of the tribal home in the great Ute reservation at Ignacio, Colo.

BREATH OF ANCIENT ROME

Proud Symbol of Old Empire, "S. P. Q. R.," Still Appears in the Italian Capital.

On the cap of the man who was lazily sweeping the dusty Roman street I saw a shield with the letters "S. P. Q. R." writes Vladimir Poliakoff in the London Daily Telegraph. It was midday, the hot rays of the sun were beating straight down, and the clouds of dust whirled up by the man's broom were full of scintillating particles.

Suddenly it seemed to me that I was looking out upon a wide plain. Among the whirls of dust I saw advancing the compact squares of Rome's legions. The helmets, the shields and the corselets burned in the sun, and the spearheads were like sparkling flames. Over the squares planed the eagles, the world-conquering eagles of Rome, with talons fixed firmly in the laurel of the wreaths wound around the bronze tablets with the lettering "S. P. Q. R."

Senatus Populusque Romanus—the senate and the people of Rome; the formula of the proud, relentless power which transformed a township on seven pretty hillocks into the capital of a world.

The clouds of dust became denser; the legions marched into them and disappeared. For a time the eagles continued to fly overhead, then they, too, were swallowed up. Suddenly, out of the dust clouds emerged the man with the broom. He paused in his work; I asked him for the meaning of the letters on his cap. He moved his hand in a slow, carelessly negative gesture.

"These letters? Who can tell, signor? An ancient sign, surely. Something connected with the syndic. But maybe not . . . An ancient sign, surely . . ." Then, all of a sudden the lazy man's eyes flashed. He said proudly: "Rome is so old, and she is the capital of Christendom."

So, hidden away, the old spirit survives. I set out to discover its hiding place. The letters S P. Q. R. I found everywhere—on all municipal buildings, on the uniforms and caps of city employees, on tramway cars, even on dustbins. But the vision of the eagles would not come back.

Among the kindly, gay, easy-going people I met there was no trace of the ancestral virility. If it is true that in the soul of every nation there are male and female characteristic traits, it seems to me that those of the weaker sex predominate in the modern Italian.

Automobile Library.

In an article, "Books That Gather No Dust," in St. Nicholas, G. F. Thomson describes the distribution of library volumes in country districts. One of the most interesting of these wagons operates out of Hibbing, Minn This village, known as the richest for its size in the world, because of the wealth of copper ore deposited there, has a book automobile which makes a daily trip through the township, distributing on the average 190 books. This is the most complete wagon of its kind. The machine is lined with inside shelves, filled with as many as 1,000 books. There is also a librarian's desk, and six people may be accommodated inside the "library" at one time. The car generates its own light and some heat, but a coal stove is installed for midwinter trips, since the thermometer gets down to around 40 below zero The librarian and his patrons, representing about fourteen different nationalities, are thus able to select and exchange books in homelike comfort. When the drifts of snow pile high the car travels the main roads, and deliveries to schools and homes off the beaten track are often made by children with their sleds.

Graveyard Flowers Protected.

The Silver String.

The strings of a violin are each of a different thickness to meet the requirements of tone and tension. The fourth string is covered with fine wire, either a white metal or real silver, hence it is often called "the silver string" Violas, violoncellos and double-basses have each two covered strings, the object being to insure a sufficient gravity of tone without having too clumsy a material. The covered strings on the guitar are upon a basis of silk instead of catgut. The best gut comes from Italy, which has been famous for centuries for this product. Strings are carefully selected and graded as to size so that they shall be uniform. The larger strings for the bigger instruments are stretched on frames for three or four days. The covered strings are finished on a special lathe, which covers them with floss silk or fine silver-plated copper wire, or even silver.

Saving Almost Naked Russians From Death From Cold Problem For Doctors; Hoover Plans Aid

American relatives and friends of the scantily clad in Russia and the Ukraine are hurrying relief to the clothing needy through the clothing material package plan of the American Relief Administration. The first big shipment of textile packages bought by sympathetic persons in the United States has gone forward and Col William N. Haskell, director of the A. R. A., in Russia has informed Herbert Hoover that they will be delivered immediately to the person or group for whom they have been designated.

Heeding the plea of their relatives and friends who fear to face the Raid Russian winter without clothing, hundreds bought clothing packages in the first few days of sale so that the A. R. A., could deliver them without loss of time. Severe winter weather is now raging throughout Russia. The packages are purchasable through the American Relief Administration [illegible] at 42 Broadway, New York City.

Especially are children in need of clothing. They are unable to [illegible] and [illegible] in their rags to go to the American Relief Administration kitchens where they receive the only meal they are able to obtain.

The clothing package plan is similar to the Hoover food remittance system whereby Americans sent food to friends and relatives abroad and saved millions of lives. The clothing package is not designated for any particular person will be forwarded to the most needy persons known by the A. R. A. workers.

One package, which costs twenty dollars, will practically equip a small family with clothing. Each package will contain nearly five yards of dark wool cloth, enough for one suit of clothing for an adult or two garments for a child; four yards of lining; 16 yards of muslin sufficient for four suits of underwear, eight yards of flannelette sufficient for two men's shirts or women's shirt waists and buttons and thread to make up these garments. Many American banks throughout the United States have consented to receive and forward funds for clothing remittance packages.

Artful Explanation.

The milliner looked at the sign she had ordered and observed it ran: "Mrss J. Blank." When she called the sign painter's attention to the error he calmly replied: "Madame, you have had two husbands. You were a 'Mrs.' when you lost the first. Do you think a woman can go on marrying and not lengthen her title? 'Mrs.' means a married woman or a widow. 'Miss.' means a woman who has been married twice and is young enough to marry again; and only yesterday, a rich old party told me that if he had any idea you were heart-free he'd come and—"

"Oh, well, you can nail up the sign," she interrupted.—Boston Transcript.

BETTER TO BE FOREHANDED

Few Advance Who Allow Themselves to Become Addicted to the Habit of Dilatoriness.

We probably all know people who seem to be as they express it, "always in a rush," yet who are always just a little late. They find apparently almost a pleasurable excitement in putting off till the last moment the performance of necessary tasks and then executing them under high pressure. No doubt there is something stimulating in having to accomplish certain results within a given time, but a good many persons in allotting their time seem to mistake the harassing for the stimulating.

Every teacher knows that, if on a Tuesday he assigns a certain task to be completed by the following Tuesday, a considerable percentage of the class will begin work upon it on Monday evening. He knows too that there is a very small fraction of the class who will set to work upon it immediately. He can soon tell which of his pupils are the forehanded and which the dilatory workers. It may be that the forehanded workers will not always do the best work. Some of the dull pupils are sure to be among the forehanded ones; they have found that they have to be, in order to keep up at all; and often among the dilatory pupils there are the brightest minds. But if not overcome, the habit of dilatoriness will eventually slow up a naturally bright and active mind, and the habit of forehandedness, if maintained, will often quicken a dull one.—Youth's Companion.

MALE GROUSE NOISY WOOERS

Make Much Commotion When Sounding Their Love Calls During the Mating Season.

Male grouse are noisy wooers. Their peculiar love calls, which during the mating season may be heard ringing through the woods and over the prairie lands, take the place of the mating song of singing birds. They are dull, booming sounds, variously produced.

Some species have a most extraordinary wing power, and by rapidly beating the air or their breast feathers, produce a sound that may be heard a mile or more. Other species are provided with an air sac or loose skin which acts as a sort of bagpipe, for the bird inflates it to an amazing size, then, with a jerking of the head, he forces the air from it with a hollow "boom boom, boom" which draws the female birds of their kind. These love "songs" are accompanied by dances strutting about and spreading feathers, and many fights among the cocks.

Haiti's Coffee Fields.

That the coffee plant will continue to thrive under most adverse conditions is amply illustrated in Haiti where it is said, no coffee has been planted since the French colonists were dispossessed of their plantations 120 years ago. The natives have merely profited from the rich farm heritage seized from their employers and rulers, and lacking even rudimentary care and cultivation, the coffee fields have lost their original productivity and have become overspread with thickets and weeds. Today there are scarcely any clearly defined coffee fields, the plants being allowed to grow wild and to become mixed with rank growths of every sort. Notwithstanding this neglect coffee is by far the most valuable product of Haiti's commerce. The bulk of the yield goes to France. Added to neglect of the plants, the Haitian coffee "raiser" injures his plants by tearing off branches with the pods, and thus diminishes productivity.

Mistaken Zeal.

Zeal ever follows an appearance of truth, and the assured are too apt to be warm; but it is their weak side in argument, zeal being better shown against sin than against persons or their mistakes.—William Penn.

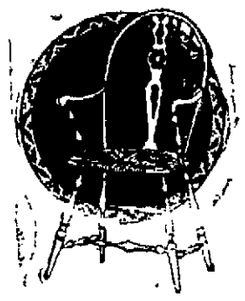
There is a good bit of character invested in the small secretarial set above. The style is Jacobean. The quaint little bench is decidedly attractive.

A hand decorated tilt top table, with scalloped edge, and a Mary Ball sewing cabinet cannot help but bring pleasure into the home they enter.

The beautiful Italian tea cart above would be a gift supreme, as it would grace the finest living room or boudoir. It is an attractive utility.



There are many adaptations of the Windsor hair. A particularly leasing one is shown above. Its rush seat makes it surprisingly comfortable.

DAUGHERTY PROBE IS RESUMED

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Dec 19.—The house judiciary committee went ahead today with the investigation of Attorney General Daugherty and his administration of the department of justice.

Abandoned and defied by Representative Keller, Republican, Minnesota, the original author of the charges against the attorney general, the committee nevertheless continued the inquiry into Keller's charges by taking up Daugherty's alleged failure to prosecute war fraud cases.

Representative Johnson of South Dakota and Woodruff of Michigan, both Republicans and both war veterans, were the principal witnesses summoned by the committee today

Johnson and Woodruff came voluntarily before the committee to present their charges, and prepared a list of witnesses whom they asked the committee to summon Whether the charges constitute impeachable offenses, even if proved, the committee has not determined and will not decide until the evidence has been taken

The Woodruff charges went direct to the activities of the attorney general, especially in connection with the Bosch Magneto Patents sales, while the Johnson attack was directed chiefly against Secretary Weeks and the sale of surplus supplies in the war department.

There are indications today that Keller will go free in his defiance of the judiciary committee by refusing to testify before it under oath. He may be called upon by the house to explain his charge that the judiciary committee was unfair, "packed" against him, and seeking to "whitewash" Daugherty.

Hearts Entombed in Jerusalem.

The heart of the hero King Charlemagne is carefully preserved in the Cathedral of Aix-la-Chapelle. The late Marquis of Bute had his heart conveyed by sea, in the custody of his eldest and favorite daughter, from Scotland to the Mount of Olives, at Jerusalem, for entombment. The heart of King Robert Bruce—Scotland's national hero—after the strangest vicissitudes in connection with a vain attempt of his knight, Black Douglas, to convey it to the Holy Land, in fulfillment of a vow made by that monarch, to make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem, was brought back from Spain, and lies buried in the now ruined abbey of Melrose, the "Kennequhair" of Sir Walter Scott's story of "The Abbot."

When King Robert Bruce's body was found in 1819, in the subvaults of the Abbey Church of Dunfermline, it was shown that his breastbone had been sawed through, in order to permit the removal of his great heart.

Parrot Fish Well Equipped.

There is a creature inhabiting the warm waters of the Mediterranean, which has a beak like a parrot, cheek pouches like those of a monkey, and chews its cud like a cow. It is called the parrot fish. It browses on the weeds that flourish on the sea floor of the Mediterranean. Its upper and lower jaws have become hardened into a sharp curved beak, which is just the tool required for lopping off tough sea weed. Each piece snipped off by the beak is passed into one of the two curious pouches which adorn the cheeks, and there it remains until the parrot fish feels that it has collected enough for a good meal. It then chews the cud by means of the splendid set of teeth, which nature has placed not in its mouth, but in its throat, we are told by the Detroit News.

First Illustrated Book.

It was the Roman author Varro, who in B. C. 70, issued the first book illustrated with portraits. He was not a great writer and he had been struggling for recognition for a good many years, when he suddenly conceived the idea of preparing a volume containing the biographies of 700 of his famous fellow-citizens. History is silent on the rather interesting question whether Varro charged them for his services, but it is loud in his praise as the first writer who conceived the idea of illustrating his work with portraits. They were crudely drawn. But they were illustrations all the same, and after that the custom of embellishing historical works with such drawings became a fad among the writers of those days.

Silk Stockings.

It appears that Henry II, when preparing for the marriage of his sister in 1559, first had the idea for silk hose. M. F. (Bradford), and at that epoch-making event he was the first to wear knitted silk stockings. A hundred years later one Hindres established a factory for stockings in the Bois de Boulogne. This was the first factory in France. It was a success from the start, and when it received protection from the ministers it became a gold mine. In 1666 the venture was turned into a company. From it arose the society of stocking makers. At this time ribbed stockings were made in England, but it was not until nearly a century later that such wear was introduced into France.

FOX TAKES A SWIM

Mr. Fox wanted some honey to eat with his hot cakes, but he did not want to go hunting for it and he did not want to ask Mr. Bear for some of his, or where to get any, because Mr. Fox and Mr. Bear were not on very good terms of friendship just then.

Mr. Fox had told Mr. Bear one night where there was a nice lamb in order to find out if there was a trap under some straw near the poultry house which Mr. Bear would have to pass. And there was a trap there, but Mr. Bear lost only one claw instead of being caught by the foot and held fast.

But he made up his mind that Mr. Fox should suffer for this and so he kept his eyes wide open for a chance to show Mr. Fox he had not forgotten.

As I told you, Mr. Fox wanted some

Mr. Fox Did Not Stop to Explain.

honey very much. So he watched Mr. Bear until he saw him go to an old tree and, as he thought, take some honey, and soon after he saw Mr. Bear sitting on the ground eating honey and making a great ado about how nice it was.

But though Mr. Fox was clever, he was this time not as clever as Mr. Bear, for Mr. Bear knew all the time that Mr. Fox was watching him. For some time he had seen Mr. Fox scudding along behind the bushes every time he went out for honey and knowing that Mr. Fox was up to something, Mr. Bear did not go near the place where he really did find honey.

"I do believe that sly fellow is trying to find out where my store of honey comes from and then help himself," said Mr. Bear. "Now, if that is what he is up to, I will soon find out."

That was the reason Mr. Bear carried a jar of honey hidden under his shaggy arm the morning he went to the tree and, as Mr. Fox thought, took out some honey.

Mr. Fox could hardly wait for Mr. Bear to get far enough away so he would not see him go to that tree, and just as soon as he thought he was, Mr. Fox ran to the tree.

What he did not notice was a broken twig—that is, he did not look to see that this twig leaned against a big wasp nest. Mr. Fox did see that it was right in his way, so he gave it a knock and reached into the hole for the honey.

He was very intent upon reaching the honey and did not see the angry wasps flying over his head, but they soon saw him, and down they came right at Mr. Fox's head.

One wasp flew on his nose. Mr. Fox thought at first that a limb had fallen and struck him, but it was for only a second, because the wasps did not keep him in doubt about their anger. They told him plainly what they thought about his rudeness in disturbing their nest.

Mr. Fox did not stop to explain that he did not intend to be rude. He just jumped down and ran for the pond not far away, and in he plunged, going right over his head, and then he swam to the other side, far away from his tormentors.

Mr. Bear was not far away, you may be sure. He was watching all that happened and when Mr. Fox was safe at home that afternoon Mr. Bear passed his house and stopped long enough to ask: "Did you enjoy your swim this morning, Mr. Fox? I saw you running for the pond and I thought at first you were going to teach the Wasp family to swim, I saw them all following you."

Mr. Bear did not stop for a reply to this remark. He just trudged right along towards home, but Mr. Fox looked after him in a very questioning manner. "Now, I wonder if he has been holding that trap affair against me all this time," he said. "Some folks have a very unforgiving disposition, that is all I have to say."

A LINE O' CHEER

By John Kendrick Bangs.

THE MOON

They say the moon is dead, but I
Believe 'tis still alive and spry,
And when at close of day the sun
Upon its smiling course has run,
And shadows fall on you and me,
It sort of acts as its trustee,
To light us o'er the shadowy plain
Until the sun comes back again.

YOUR HAND

How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

ILLNESS SHOWN IN THE HAND

As HUMANKIND is subject to the affliction of very many varieties of disease, so are the signs or marks many and varied.

A line rising from the line of life and ending in an island on the mount of Saturn, beneath the middle finger, is a sign of pleurisy. Rheumatism, or a tendency toward that widespread disease, is shown by a skin that has a satiny feel. A fork at the termination of the line of life is also a sign with fine lines crossing downward at the commencement of the line of the heart.

Scarlet fever is shown by a small square on the line of life, the square bearing on its inside an upright cross Very narrow and curved nails show danger of spinal disease. Peril of sunstroke is shown by an island on the line of the head under the mount of the sun, which lies at the base of the ring finger. If the hand shows a long and wavy line of the heart, with a line of health that is also wavy, and has the second phalanx of the fingers relatively longer than the other, the subject will suffer from poor teeth.

THE RIGHT THING at the RIGHT TIME

By MARY MARSHALL DUFFEE

GOOD FORM IN PAYING

Render therefore to all their dues—Bible

IT HAS come to be the general custom in business, when employees are not paid by check, to place the amount of their wage or salary in small envelopes. Even when a man's office force consists only of a stenographer and an office boy, their weekly stipend should be placed in an envelope in this way. The man who pays his employees by dealing out the required amount from his pocket is certainly behind the time and decidedly inconsiderate. It is likewise a custom in business that the amount an employee receives shall be more or less confidential, unless the employee wishes to make it otherwise, and the amount is therefore not written on the outside of the envelope.

The woman in the home who employs several servants should be similarly considerate. Often it is convenient for her to pay by check, but where it is not she should show as much consideration as the business man. Any employer who delays payment of wages so that the employee has to ask for them is surely both unbusinesslike and ill bred.

In many small towns, especially, the custom of paying almost all obligations by check prevails. Thus the housewife would carry almost no money on hand, and would even pay the woman by the day for a day's work by check. If the woman had no checking account herself, it would be a simple matter to have the check cashed, either at the bank or by some business man to whom she was known. But in a large city it often causes inconvenience to the one paid to use checks for such small amounts.

Some people seem to think that postage stamps are legal tender, and although, as a matter of convenience, some business concerns receive them in payment for small sums by mail, they should never be used in this way save where there is the understanding that they are acceptable. If you owe a friend any money, save a few cents the use of stamps in this way is inconsiderate. Such a debt should be paid either by check or by money order—never should you send a bill in a letter. If you send a check, make sure that you either include the exchange fee in the amount for which the check is made, or that there is no fee between your bank and the one of the person to whom it is sent.

In transacting business with a large concern out of town, you need not include the exchange fee, as it is quite likely that a good many checks between the two places are handled weekly and the amount of the exchange would be inconsiderable.

HIS WIFE NAMES 122 AS RIVALS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 19.—Providence society was thrown into a panic today when counsel for Mrs. Minnie Engleheart, who is suing her husband, the Rev. Dr. Adolph H. Engleheart, for divorce, filed a bill of particulars naming 122 women. Mrs. Engleheart claims her husband, "pastor" of the Church of the Divine Science, has a strong hypnotic power which he uses over the women who come to him for "divine healing." The church is said to be of a spiritualistic leaning.

Mrs. Engleheart bases her suit on charges of extreme cruelty and her husband's association "with other women for immoral purposes." She claims he beat her and threw various objects at her.

Engleheart had been in trouble with the federal authorities in 1898 when his "temple" here was raided. During the war he was committed to an internment camp and upon his return resumed his practice of "divine healing."

It was then that he married Minnie Colwell, daughter of a prominent and socially prominent politician. She was but 16 years of age when she married Engleheart.

Many of the women named in the bill of particulars are said to be members of Engleheart's church or cult, and many of the others are prominent in local society.

RED CROSS GARMENTS SHIPPED TO SMYRNA

The garments which were collected through the Ulster County Chapter of the Red Cross for the Smyrna Relief, and taken to the city hall, were all shipped today. As there is a steamer sailing on the 25th, it is expected that the gifts from Ulster County will be in time to be added to that consignment. The Red Cross workers wish to express their appreciation of the splendid garments that have been received, many of them entirely new. As usual the people of Ulster county have been generous in their giving and the Red Cross Production Committee having this work in charge wish to publicly thank all those persons who in any way contributed to the making possible that such a shipment could go out of our city. Now, in reference to the garments being made by the various women's clubs for the Smyrna Relief layettes, the Red Cross asks that they be completed and sent in to the Red Cross room at the city hall, by the middle of January at the latest. Each club should, assemble all the garments made by its members and send the completed package, marked with the club name, to the Red Cross.

ALBANY BEATS COHOES AND MOVES CLOSER TO LOCALS.

Kingston Wins Exhibition Game From Ellenville Quintet.

Albany defeated the Cohoes quintet at the latter's court Monday evening by a 31 to 23 tally. Riconda was the big point getter with 13 for his total. Albany moves closer to Kingston, the league leaders, having won 10 and lost 6 games. The local representatives play three games this week and winning two of the contests will give the home club a safe lead for the first half laurels.

In an exhibition game at Ellenville the Kingston State League team defeated the Independents by a 56 to 27 tally. Carl and Mickey Husta and Borgman were the big point getters. Traphagen did the best shooting for the Ellenville quintet. On Wednesday evening at the local armory court Amsterdam comes here to battle the league leaders. Amsterdam is last in league standing, with but four wins out of 18 starts. Kingston is included amongst these four, the cellarites of the league having defeated the local team for the first time this season in league contests.

P. H. S. BASKETBALLERS WERE NOT EXTENDED

Poughkeepsie High School easily defeated Philmont High School in an uninteresting game at Poughkeepsie last Saturday night by a 38 to 16 score. The Poughkeepsie team is looking forward to the game with Albany High School this week which will be a fair indication of their ability on the court as Albany has a good team this year having won all its games thus far against some good opposition.

GRENADE IN THE ROYAL ASH CART

It Apparently Was Entering Buckingham Palace Without Intent to Kill, but Recent Plots Have Made Police Nervous.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, Dec. 19.—What may have been a plot to assassinate members of the British royal family, was discovered today when a hand grenade was found in the refuse of an ash cart that was being taken into Buckingham Palace.

The bomb was turned over to Scotland Yard for examination.

Later officials of the Metropolitan Police said they did not believe that a plot existed against the lives of King George and his family but that they were investigating carefully. It was pointed out that even if anarchists or others had designs against the lives of the royal family, they would be unlikely to be successful by lodging a bomb in an ash cart, which would not get past the kitchen.

Ever since an attempt was made upon the life of Sir William Horwood, head of the Metropolitan Police, with poisoned candy last month, the police have been extra vigilant in guarding the royal family.

The grenade, it was learned later, was covered with dirt and apparently had been discarded. The police believe that it was dumped into the ash cart unintentionally.

CHINA DEMANDS GOOD ROADS

Oriental Country Awakes to the Necessity of Immediate Development of Its Highways.

A plea for good roads as a necessity for the proper development of China is made by the Oriental Motor of Shanghai, which began publication a year ago to encourage interest in motor use. Asking where the United States would have been if the good roads movement had not been earnestly supported throughout the country, the editor says:

"Yet at this time of greatest development in the making of roads China lies dormant. If any nation in the world needs roads, good roads and national highways, it is China. Means of communication in the country are inadequate and medieval, transcontinental travel is only possible by water at the rim of the country, while the great heart of the nation is still inaccessible to any mode of transportation except the most primitive.

"China can never become a nation until her roads are developed. With them the penetration of the interior, both for commerce and pleasure, would mean a few hours or a few days by motor. The people of the interior would be brought into touch daily with motors and motorists from all sections of the nation. They would begin to realize that there are parts of the country other than their own province and city, and the great welding influence which would make China a nation united would begin."—New York Times.

UNWORTHY RULER OF ROME

History Accords Low Place to Commodus, Whom Fortune Capriciously Lifted to High Estate.

Commodus was a Roman emperor, notorious for his cruel and voluptuous character. He was endowed with extraordinary strength, and often appeared in imitation of Hercules, dressed in a lion's skin and armed with a club. To display his skill and strength in arms he appeared publicly in the amphitheater. As his opponents were armed with weapons of tin or lead, while he was encased in impenetrable armor, he had naturally an easy victory on every occasion. For his amusement he cut asunder persons, put out their eyes, and mutilated their noses, etc.

Commodus was strangled by the gladiator Narcissus, who was hired to commit the deed by Marcia, the mistress of Commodus, who had plotted with members of his official family, to put him out of the way. When he died the senate declared him an enemy of the state, ordered his statues to be broken to pieces, and his name to be erased from all public inscriptions.—Detroit News.

Searching for Shock.

There are so many instances where speech and hearing have been restored by a severe shock that there is a general notion among deaf and dumb persons that their salvation rests in this direction. Consequently they are resorting to airplane trips as a means of restoring their functions. The manager of the air station at Croydon, England, reports that he is besieged with requests from these afflicted persons who are hopeful that an experience in midair might supply the necessary shock. The parents of an afflicted child brought their offspring to the station and made a request that the child be taken aloft with the idea of possibly curing her, but aside from the tonic effect upon the child there was no other result. The child returned to the ground in a very happy frame of mind and was delighted with her experience. It has been suggested that the trip aloft does not have the desired effect for the reason that the various experiences in the air are more or less expected and therefore the element of suddenness and shock are lacking.

DOESN'T KNOW HOW TO LOVE

Gilbert Frankau Believes the Young Woman of Today Is Not Capable of Self-Sacrifice.

You have to watch the modern dance to see the modern girl at her most self-revealing. Regard her carefully, this bepainted, bepowdered, be manicured product of our hectic age as she circles the ballroom. She dances emotionally, but her emotions are for the rhythm and the music, not for the mere male, her partner. Even in a man's arms she is as nearly sexless as the ladies of the Lysistrata, Gilbert Frankau writes in the Forum. Regarding her thus, one cannot help answering the question which stands at the head of this article in the most emphatic negative. No! Give her all her good qualities, her poise, her efficiency, her intelligence and you will still be forced to admit that—judging her superficially—the modern girl is not capable of a great and enduring love. To begin with, she is too selfish, too self-centered, too set on the pursuit of what she considers pleasure, to abandon herself to that self-sacrifice which is love at its best. And then, perhaps, she is too wise.

Myself, I am and have always been, a strong supporter of the civil contract in matrimony. Matrimony, after all, is—however much sentimental, middle-aged fogeys like myself may like to regard it as a pure love affair—a legal undertaking. And I think that it is high time for the young man of today to understand that his legal undertaking when he marries a self-supporting or an independent young woman is not confined purely and simply to housing her. The modern woman, you see, is something more than a mere domesticated pet. She requires her leisures, her pleasures and, more perhaps even than these, her full partnership rights.

STARLIGHT HEAT SPECTRUM

Scientist of Smithsonian Institution Explains How It May Be Determined.

By measuring a hundred millionth degree of temperature and a trillionth of an ampere of electric current, Dr. C. G. Abbot of the Smithsonian institution has determined for the first time the heat spectrum of starlight, as he announced in an address at the Carnegie institution of Washington.

Working with the 100-inch telescope at Mount Wilson observatory this fall, Doctor Abbot measured the heat at different parts of the spectrum of ten stars and the sun. The rays were dispersed by a spectroscope in a band similar to the rainbow.

The bright star Capella, which is very similar to our own sun in its spectrum, was found to furnish the equivalent of one horsepower to an area on the earth approximately equal to the state of Minnesota. But this prominent star is feeble compared with our sun, which is equal to a hundred billion Capellas and sends down on twenty square feet heat equal to a horsepower. On the whole earth Capella's heat equals 500 horsepower, and as all the stars together equal 500 Capellas, this would amount to one-quarter million horsepower over the whole earth from the stars alone.

Scottish Estates Being Sold.

Enormous estates in Scotland are going under the hammer, due in many cases to the taxes that have followed the war. As many as 310 square miles of forests, grouse moors and farms, with salmon and trout fishing, whole rivers and lochs, islands and mountains, and comfortable houses are offered for sale at the present time, including a large part of the Caledonian forest. Yacht anchorages and sea fishing are plentiful.

The briefest statement of the game bags on some of the properties, and of the average takes of trout and salmon, brings into strong relief the fact that, like Scott's "Finnan haddock," the sporting thus indicated "has a relish of a very peculiar and delicate flavor," inimitable elsewhere.

Going One Better.

One of the brightest "stars" in "The Island King" at the Adelphi theater is Nancie Lovat. She sings and acts charmingly.

I paid Miss Lovat a visit the other evening, and she asked me if I had "heard this one." I hadn't.

Two kiddies were engaged in a fragging match.

"My mummy's gone to the shops to pay some bills," said Joan, proudly.

"My mummy doesn't have to," sneered Doris. "The men come to the house for ours."

Here is another of Miss Lovat's stories.

"George!" murmured the girl, as she nestled close to him, "cigars are nothing but a habit."

"Yes, and you're now broken one of my habits," said the young man, as he sadly withdrew the remains of a Havana from his pocket.—London Tit-Bits.

ENGLISH BOY NEVER WEEPS

Fourteen-Year-Old Lad Hasn't Shed Tears Since His Birth.

The case of the boy who never laughs, which recently aroused interest in the scientific world of England, now has a rival in that of a boy who has reached fourteen years old and has never shed a tear. This strange lad is Bernard Waites, of Camberwell.

His mother states that she has never seen his eyes moistened since he was born, although he has had all the childish ailments and troubles which normally bring tears. Bernard's boy companions long tried to make him cry by all manner of devices. They tormented him, told him sad stories, and even stuck pins in him, but without avail.

He is a strong, well-knit boy, but lisps like a young child, and still has seven of his first teeth uncut. He only began to talk when he reached his twelfth year. His mother says he has more than the normal boy's share of feeling, intelligence, and understanding, but she believes a good burst of tears would cure him of his backwardness.

Right.

Indeed, no one can have a true idea of right, until he does it; any genuine reverence for it, till he has done it often and with cost; any peace ineffable in it, till he does it always and with alacrity.—James Martineau.

STOLE FOR CHILD'S SAKE

Penniless Burglar Took Infant's Money and Clothing.

A note, written presumably by burglar, promising to pay for the articles he had stolen and pleading that was out of work and money on the of his little daughter's birthday, found in the home of Mr. and Robert Syms, at Secaucus, N. J.

The room where the note was was in disorder, and a checkup revealed that the intruder had taken money, a doll, a child's ring, a chain and two dresses belonging a daughter of the Syms.

"Sorry I have to do this, but tomorrow is my little girl's birthday am out of work and broke. If I get my feet again I'll pay everything don't forget that," the short note

Reliance PANCAKE FLOUR

"When the frost is on the pumpkin;
And the fodder's in the shock."—

That's the time to serve Reliance Pancakes for breakfast. These crisp Fall mornings seem to tantalize appetite in a way that can only be appeased with a platter of Reliance Pancakes.

A breakfast of these good, old-fashioned cakes flanked by a pot of coffee is much more satisfying to the average mortal than a ten-course affair in a fashionable restaurant.

Everybody loves 'em, especially men and boys. And mother likes them too because it's such an easy matter to fry them. No fuss, no muss—just stir up a batter and put on the griddle.

Order a package of your grocer to-day. Serve them tomorrow morning. Wm. T. Reynolds & Co., Inc., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

"IN THE PUBLIC EYE"
BY Dr. S. Stern

OUR eyes are the school teachers of our brain. They must help to interpret the messages of our other senses. Between seventy and eighty per cent of the children who do not progress properly in their studies at school are backward because of deficient eye-sight. Do not send your child to school with such impaired vision equipment. Let us examine into the cause and make the proper glasses to correct his failing.

NEW DEMAND FOR "MOVIE" CLEANUP

Reid Exposes Leads Senators to Call For Stricter Laws Against Narcotics or Investigation and Expulsion of Undesirables from Filmdom.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Enactment of more drastic anti-narcotic laws probably will result from revelations that Wally Reid, famous motion picture star, was a slave of drugs, it was declared today in congressional circles.

The affliction of Reid was termed by Senator Shortridge, Republican, California, in whose state the actor became addicted to drugs, as a "danger signal" to the whole movie world of the "frightful punishment inflicted by drugs." Shortridge recommended harsher enforcement of existing laws and new federal restrictions to wipe out the drug trade throughout the nation.

The same governmental action was suggested by Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, chairman of the senate committee on education and labor. Borah frowned on federal censorship of the movies as a means of eradicating the evils of filmdom. He declared American motherhood fully capable of protecting children from undesirable films.

Senator Myers, Democrat, Montana, who recently attacked the Hollywood movie colony from the floor of the senate, declared the Reid case indicated the need of a "clean up of undesirable characters in the movies." A bill by Myers to provide federal censorship of films in the District of Columbia, is now pending before Borah's committee.

"The Reid case will focus the attention of congress on the need of more drastic anti-drug laws," declared Shortridge. "There should also be stricter enforcement of existing laws. Reid's sudden collapse is a danger signal to the rest of the movie colony and the whole nation of the frightful punishment inflicted by these deadly drugs. The moral to be gained from his case should not be an attack on the movies but a warning to those who traffic and use deadly drugs.

"If Reid has triumphed over drugs, it is much to his credit. His case ought to be held up as an example before the nation to show that youth, beauty, genius, all perish before the ravages of the drug. No man is above their reach, and such a striking case of this kind should arrest the attention of lawmakers to the need of stricter laws and more drastic enforcement of the laws already enacted."

Senator Borah declared he was opposed to any move to censor films in which Reid should appear. Proper censorship laws would be considered by his committee.

"I don't take to censoring the movies," Borah added. "I don't know any better censor than the motherhood of America. I doubt whether any government contrivance could be compared to the heart and mind of a mother. If she doesn't want her child to see a certain class of movie, the child won't. The remedy probably lies in stricter anti-drug laws and better enforcement of present laws."

Senator Myers in urging a "clean up of the movie colony," declared reports that Will Hays, czar of moviedom, would launch an investigation, would be met by public wishes of success.

"I think the charge that Wallace Reid is a drug addict justifies the claim there should be a clean-up in the character of the men and women who furnish attractions for the motion picture business," said Myers. "The alleged disclosures show that many of the charges made against motion picture colonies appear to be true and justified."

"Indeed! How do you manage it?"

"I simply make my wife so mad she refuses to speak to me."

POETS OF MORE IMPORTANCE

What Ambassador Page Discussed With Sir Edward Grey During Most Serious Crisis.

Ambassador Page's letters sufficiently reveal his fondness for Sir Edward Grey and the splendid relations that existed between the two men. The sympathetic cords which they struck upon their first meeting only became stronger with time. A single episode of the war illustrates the kind of fellow-feeling that drew them together. It took place at a time when the tension over the blockade was especially threatening, according to "Life and Letters of Walter H. Page," in the World's Work. One afternoon Page asked for a formal interview; he had received another exceedingly disagreeable protest from Washington, with instructions to push the matter to a decision; the ambassador left his embassy with a grave expression upon his face and his associates were especially worried over the outcome. So critical did the situation seem that the most important secretaries gathered in the ambassador's room, awaiting his return, their nerves strung almost to the breaking point. An hour went by and nothing was heard from Page; another hour slowly passed and still the ambassador did not return. The faces of the assembled staff lengthened as the minutes went by; what was the ambassador doing at the foreign office? So protracted an interview could portend only evil; already, in the minds of these nervous young men, ultimatums were flying between the United States and Great Britain, and even war might be hanging in the balance. Another hour drew out its weary length; the room became dark, dinner time was approaching and still Page failed to make his appearance. At last, when his distracted subordinates were almost prepared to go in search of their chief, the ambassador walked jauntily in, smiling and apparently carefree. What had happened? What was to be done about the detained ships?

"What ships?" asked Page, and then suddenly he remembered. "Oh, yes—those." That was all right; Sir Edward had at once promised to release them; it had been settled in a few minutes.

"Then why were you so long?"

The truth came out; Sir Edward and Page had quickly turned from intercepted cargoes to the more congenial subject of Wordsworth, Tennyson and other favorite poets, and the rest of the afternoon had been consumed in discussing this really important business.

TILLSON.

Tillson, Dec. 18.—The Friends' Sunday school will give its Christmas entertainment on Friday evening, December 22. All are invited to attend. Proceeds for starving children of Russia.

It is indeed very pleasant to see the light once gain shining from the windows of the Ackert homestead.

Mr. and Mrs. Hass of New Jersey, who have purchased and moved in the Jacob Christiana place, are very much pleased with their home. They are improving it by installing electricity and a water system.

The Friends' Church has decided to discontinue its Sunday evening service during the winter months. The morning service will be held as usual.

Yuletide Musings.

I do not trot with those who hold
That Christmas gifts should be
Of nature sternly practical—
It matters not to me.
If in my festive sock I find,
When comes the Yuletide dawn,
Some gift for which I have no use—
I'll merely pass it on.

L' Envoi.

I do, however, yearn to kill
That Yuletide pest sublime
Who holds a present back until
I've spent my last thin dime.

Lending money is a fine way to improve your memory.

Alarm clock prices are back to prewar figures, as the children come home now just in time to wake the old folks up.

A New Jersey naturalist tells of a rabbit killing three cats. Now, which one got hold of the stuff—the rabbit or the naturalist?

A candidate for the position of the world's meanest man has appeared in the person of the editor of a small Missouri newspaper, who published the following item in his "Social Gossip" column: "Miss ———, a young lady of 20 summers, is now on a visit to her twin brother, aged 31."

Sure Enough.

"What in the world are you staring at that married couple so intently for?" asked one young lady of another on the train.

"Oh!" said the other girl with a start and a sigh. "It's so natural for us girls to contemplate matrimony, you know."

A Slight Misunderstanding.

The sweet-faced elderly woman, who was shopping, was peering nearsightedly at a small cup which she had picked up from a pile on the counter. Presently she remarked: "I can't see very well through my glasses. Are these tin?"

"No," said the sales girl, "they're fifteen."

The Lord helps them that help each other. Business shows that the more we help the more we prosper.

"Have you read Ivanhoe?"

"No, those Russian novels bore me."

When a girl is so bow-legged that she can wear a parenthesis for stockings she just naturally has no use for short skirts.

More Truth Than Poetry!

There was a young man named Samuel Jones
Who said he didn't need an education,
Now each week he earns eight bones,
Sweeping out a railroad station!

It is sometimes said that the office seeks the man, but usually he breaks his neck to have it find him.

RUTGERS GLEE CLUB HERE DEC. 29

The following details of the concert by the Rutgers Glee Club to be given at the high school auditorium on Friday evening, December 29, have been received by the alumni association, under whose auspices the club is being brought to this city.

The program will open with a group of college and football songs dealing with life at Rutgers, which will be followed by two numbers given by the instrumental club, four by the Glee Club and five specialties. While the group members possibly provide more music, the specialties furnish the fun of the evening, fun of the sort that those who are, or have been once young, will understand. The music used ranges in character from standard serious music used for some of the glee club numbers to the light popular and college music of the day, providing for all sorts or tastes. The "Prickly Heat Quartet," one of the features of the club for the past two years, will again be ready for its share of the fun, as well as the "Jazz Bandits," a number which has proved exceedingly and increasingly popular. With regard to the selections by the larger groups, it is almost sufficient to say that Howard D. McKinney, the director of music at Rutgers and a well known musician and composer, coaches the clubs. Last year the Rutgers clubs several times played in towns where the musical organizations of the larger and more extensive universities of the country also entertained, and according to the press criticism, in no case did Rutgers suffer by comparison.

"Y" OPEN HOUSE FOR PART TIME STUDENTS.

The local Y. M. C. A. will hold an open house Wednesday night for the male members of the part time school. All fellows who are now attending the part time school are cordially invited to use the equipment of the association as the association. A special program has been prepared, insuring a good time for those who accept the invitation. The first part of the evening will be given to work in the gymnasium, floor work, basketball and other games. A swim and shower will follow, and after that refreshments will be served. A short entertainment has also been prepared.

There will be no admission charged for these privileges, but each fellow must provide himself with a gym suit, sneaks or basketball shoes, and a towel.
